ON PUNISHMENT & REHABILITATION
Parents, politicians, judges and others all must address the question of how to peacefully correct non-peaceful behavior. As we begin a month that is centered on peace, we'll consider various ways to deal with wrong-doing, whether it is committed by criminals or our children. Or ourselves.

BREATHING PEACE
Holiday season bringing you down? You aren't alone! For very many people, the joy and togetherness of the season also brings sorrow as we mourn lost loved ones, stress as we face hardship, or depression from the lack of light. We offer an antidote today: the Buddhist breathing practice of Tonglen, a powerful tool for cultivating inner peace. Without peace in the heart, there is no peace in the world.

HOPE
By Rev. Chris Bell.
[Reprinted from December 2017]

"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen," we read in Hebrews 11:1, a letter of unknown origin in the New Testament. It comes to mind as we transition from considering faith to considering hope. Clearly these two experiences are related.

According to my computer, which knows and sees all, faith is "complete trust or confidence in someone or something," whereas hope is "a feeling of expectation and desire for a certain thing to happen," or "the grounds for believing that something good will happen." I’ve got both. I think the whole purpose of my ministry, and of this congregation, is to grow faith and hope in me and in you.

For me, faith is a basic loving orientation toward life in its totality. I accept that I am completely in the Universe’s hands, and affirm that whatever is unfolding is worthy and true. Such faith allows me to even embrace the fact of my own death, the likelihood of my suffering, even the acts of evil that humans impose upon one another. All things that actually exist are an indisputable part of myself and my experience, and of the “outer” world that shapes that experience, which I find so precious, so beautiful, so awe-inspiring. How then, can I not trust the Universe? What else could one have confidence in? This confidence has endured in me, even when “bad” things have happened, whether the deaths of my parents, the ending of my marriage, massive wildfires, or another season of Cleveland football. I live with a sense that every experience can be, must be, embraced and integrated into my being. “I trust you even to kill me,” Hafiz wrote of God, admiring It’s capacity to grow our souls through our sorrows.

I know She will kill me, of that there is no doubt, and yet I give thanks every day for the gift of life.

Of course, I’m not just going to lay down on the ground and wait to die.

Not when a few more people showing up might preserve natural resources for my great-grandchildren. Not when a songbook and a guitar will keep us all deliciously happy and sad for hours. Not as long as little Rosie, my granddaughter, breathes will I cease to cherish life, and not even if she stops breathing before me.

Seeing the Universe as it really is also requires acknowledging that it is continually rebirthing and evolving. And thus faith brings forth hope. The story of life on Earth (and probably everywhere) is one of ever increasing complexity and morality. Earth was born of mere dust, yet – thanks to gravity, one of the Goddess’s primary tools – became rock and flame, brought forth new chemistry, atmospheres, biospheres, bacteria, fish, dinosaurs, shrews, monkeys, and then humans. What a wonder! Over the course of time, humanity itself has also evolved and, as Stephen Pinker ... ably demonstrated, become ever more moral. We’ve hardly completed the morality project, I’ll grant, what with an estimated 40 million slaves world-wide and an Earth-killing economic system, but at least we aren’t all gathering at the public square to burn witches.

I think this moral improvement is built-in to the hardware and software of the Universe. I disagree with the Humanists in our tradition who argued that morality is an entirely human creation, and side with Channing and Emerson who saw that anything of human creation was dependent upon the Cosmic Whole upon which we depend for our very lives. We didn’t invent love, or the mathematical harmony of matter and energy, or consciousness; we found them within us. It would appear that the Universe is geared from the beginning to bring forth beings that are made happy by music, creativity, the Sun, and each other. I’m with the Beatles, man. The Universe is getting better all the time.

If the Universe, as it really and actually is, is continually evolving, and I dare say improving, than so can I, and so can humanity, no matter how bad things might appear at times. “While there’s life, there is hope,” wrote Stephen Hawking, who [knew] a thing or two about both science and suffering.

In the end, I just have to ask, how else are you going to live? “If you assume that there is no hope, you guarantee that there will be no hope,” says Noam Chomsky. I agree. We must hope.

Erich Fromm, also no stranger to suffering, observed, “To hope means to be ready at every moment for that which is not yet born, and yet not become desperate if there is no birth in our lifetime. Those whose hope is weak settle for comfort or for violence, those whose hope is strong see and cherish signs of new life and are ready every moment to help the birth of that which is ready to be born.”

In this holiday season, which celebrates the birth of a new year and of new life, the birth of Jesus, the return of the sleeping Goddess, the miracle of the Temple lights, and the Buddha’s enlightenment, may we feel such hope stir within us. May we all be ready every moment to help the birth of that which is ready to be born.

Love to you all,

Reverend Chris Bell
I woke this morning thinking about the holidays. Not the normal stuff like where am I going to be, who with, what presents to buy, what would I like people to give me (AAARRGGHH!), what will the meal be, how can I keep the pounds off (or at least down!). I woke thinking instead what do the holidays mean to me? And how has that changed over the years?

When I was a kid, it was all about the LOOT. One Christmas, my sister and I had a contest: “who got the most Barbie clothes?” We each piled up our boxes, and I think I came out the winner by one or two clothing sets. Victory! For my sister, the agony of defeat.

As a young single woman, it meant vacation from my job and going home to my family. With young children of my own, it was all about them – what presents and what traditions to give them. (And how to entertain them on school break!)

My children are older and most-of-a-country away. I’m on my own, older and somewhat wiser. Now the holidays are about love, connection, traditions, family, happiness, peace, wonder, being touched, community. They aren’t about the “stuff” – except as a way in to connect in love.

It is work for me to focus on these concepts in the hustle-bustle, cold and frenetic busyness and consumerism of this time of year. Our Christmas Eve service helps a lot with that. When all the candles are lit, all the lights go out and all our voices rise in Silent Night, I am moved to tears. Every year. Every time. I am brought right down into the heart of the season. Love. Deep connection. Wonder. Peace. Possibility. Community.

At this time of year, I am so grateful to this community holding me. Until I found this place, it was my family that held me. Now I have something much bigger – my UUCSR community. While individuals may come and go, the community holds. That’s our strength. I am so deeply grateful for this community. Based in our principles, giving each of us a safe place to both be ourselves and strive to be our best selves.

This community is rock-solid in what it provides for its members. Over and over, through the years, UUCSR has proven itself. Through good times and bad times, through growing larger (which is a test of its own) and through changing times, what this community is about hasn’t changed – and that, too, is its strength. This is something I KNOW I can rest in – and I can count on its holding me. And when I am held that way, I can take chances, I can reach out, I can grow. I can be surprised in where that growth takes me! I know that, because of this community, rooted in its values and principles, I will always be steered to be on the right path.

Our congregation is in a time of transition and growth. I’m excited to find out what the future will bring. I CAN be excited...because I know I can always rest in the arms of this unique, treasured community. Come be held with me while reaching for new possibilities.

Much love to you, and may you be renewed and reopened to the mystery and joy of this time,

-Natalie Brundred,
President , Board of Trustees
December in Religious Education:
As we finish the 1st quarter of RE, I want to thank the amazing lead teachers who have donated their time, energy and love to the children and youth at UUCSR these past three months. Thank you, Deborah Carter-Hope, Lois Nagle, Janet Barrows, and Jean Smith!

Chalice Children (Pre-K)
Our preschoolers will learn that our congregation is a place where we celebrate winter holidays. They will also learn about special gatherings like weddings and other services of love and union, and memorial services, as well. Please welcome the 2nd quarter lead teacher, Carol Kraemer!

Love Surrounds Us (K-1st Grade)
Kindergarten and 1st graders will learn about the importance of equality and how words matter, including the Lakota Sioux tradition of the talking stick, and the story of Ruby Bridges, as well. They will be joined by their new 2nd quarter lead teacher, Elizabeth Olsen – welcome, Elizabeth!

Bibleodeon (4th-5th Grades)
4th and 5th graders will wrap up their study of the book of Genesis with Joseph and his coat of many colors by creating a fabric masterpiece. They will then focus on the Biblical sources of Hanukkah and Christmas, led by new lead teacher Larisa Ashley. Welcome, Larisa!

Crossing Paths (MUUGs)
Middle schoolers will delve into Catholicism in December. They will be visited by Sharon McCarty for a faith interview, and take a trip to St. Rose Catholic Church later in the month. Monique Pavon, already beloved by MUUGs, will move into the lead teacher position. She will be assisted by new assistant teachers Jonathan and Lan Choe, Melissa Neufer and Gretta Klosevitz. Welcome, all!

Love Will Guide Us: Learning the UU Sources with 2nd & 3rd Grade
RE Teacher extraordinaire Janet Barrows learned quickly that teaching this year’s RE class of 2nd and 3rd graders would require countless interesting stories, active games and hands-on activities. In this photo taken on Sunday, November 18, Janet and assistant teacher Elizabeth Olsen, along with the help of a MUUGs student, teach the concept of “one body,” a community comprised of many different people, as it was taught in Christian sources.

The 2nd and 3rd graders love to share during their joys & sorrows ritual, and they enjoyed learning about science and wonder this quarter, including the Big Bang, evolution, what the word "awesome" really means, as well as the difference between fact, theory and belief. I have heard from several parents just how much information and critical thinking these children are bringing home with them. Learning the UU Sources comes after a year of learning about the UU Principles in religious education classes, and is an important step for the children as they create a foundation for their faith formation.

In December, 2nd and 3rd graders will join with the 4th and 5th grades to learn about Hanukkah and Christmas. In addition, they will think about how they can give the gift of their time to friends and family in December. Please give a warm welcome to the new lead teacher during the 2nd quarter, Sean Freese!

THE MAKING OF A UUCSR STORY QUILT

Starting Sunday, December 16

You are invited to participate in a project that will create a visual and story portrait of our community. Here's what we plan:

Banners of cloth with photographs and brief origin stories of each of us transferred onto the cloth, hung throughout our space:

A patchwork quilt that will tell a story of our community here at UUCSR

We will begin by taking photos and gathering stories from 30 of us. Several of us on the committee have already done this and we think the result is lovely. Our first photo shoot will be on Sunday, December 16, between services and after the 11 AM service. Leslie Norinsky is our photographer.

We have edited the classic poem, "I Am From" by George Ella Lyon, and will ask you each to complete the poem to accompany your photo. We will work our way through the congregation, inviting all to participate. Our first 30 folks will make up our first panel, the second 30, our second panel, and so on.

Please see this month's insert for the story, the personal poem that we are asking you to complete.

Project Avary

Sunday, December 9
12:30 in Board Room

Project Avary is a non-profit organization that is a year-round program tailored to meet the unique emotional needs of children with a parent in prison.

They intervene early in the lives of children, at the ages of 8-11, and make a long-term 10-year commitment providing support, resources, guidance, and training for each child and family.

This gives the kids a deep sense of belonging, dignity, and hope instead of becoming one of the many that end up in prison like their parent.

Join us to learn how Project Avary is a life saver for these children.

After 11:00 am Service in Room 545

The Advocates for Social Justice (A4SJ) Film Project continues with the 3rd film of its Care in Community series with the multi-award winning film CRAZYWISE. Directed by Phil Borges and Kevin Tomlinson and released in 2017.

As a new and yet age-old approach to mental health care, it asks the question: Crazy...or wise? The traditional wisdom of indigenous cultures often contradicts modern views about a mental health crisis. Is it a ‘calling’ to grow or just a ‘broken brain’? The documentary CRAZYWISE explores what can be learned from people around the world who have turned their psychological crisis into a positive transformative experience.

Snacks, but not lunch will be provided.
We will have our usual post-film discussion period.

VOLUNTEER WITH VERITY
WORK WITH YOUTH TO REDUCE ABUSE
Following the recent presentation of the film, "The Hunting Ground", and the discussion and self expression it stimulated, the Advocates for Social Justice followed up with the folks from Verity who came to help us. Verity is a non-profit organization which:

...facilitates healing and promotes the prevention of violence...with a special focus on sexual assault and abuse...by providing counseling, advocacy, intervention, and education in our community.

Verity Mission Statement
We learned of a volunteer opportunity with Verity, Prevention Educator. Following a 30 hour training volunteers help empower young people and educate them to reduce their vulnerability to physical, sexual, and emotional abuse, primarily through classroom presentations/workshops. If this seems something you may be interested in you can pick up an information sheet as well as an application form at the Advocates' table on Sundays.

There are other volunteer opportunities with Verity as well. You can learn more at the website: www.ourverity.org and click on "Get Involved", or contact the Prevention Education Manager at (707) 545-7270, ext. 12.

"A Day On, Not A Day Off"
January 21, 2019, Sonoma County
Community Baptist Church (CBC) hosts Dr. King's "A Day On, Not A Day Off" Celebration.
This yearly celebration of Dr. King's legacy is a time for neighbors to engage and work together to serve our communities.

This holiday offers a great opportunity to give back by serving. Some past service projects included cleaning up public spaces, gathering and distributing goods to those in need, offering repairs/yardwork for people who needed assistance—and more!

One of our T.I.E. groups helped people write to their elected officials, which was a great success! A service project can be developed to meet any need in our community.

One suggestion was for volunteers to clear brush/debris around homes for those who are unable to.

A simple way to be involved is to help set up for the event on Sunday, January 18th at 1:30 at CBC. There is also a CBC clean-up crew that would start at about 2:00 p.m. on January 19. Please contact Sibyl Day or Carol Kraemer to volunteer or for more information. Thanks in advance to our beloved community!

CUUPS / UUCSR
WINTER SOLSTICE CELEBRATION
Friday, December 21 5:30 pm-7:30 pm
A Family-Friendly All-Congregation Service
Crave the light and warmth of the Sun?
Join us for UUCSR’s 2018 Winter Solstice.

In our ceremony we will thank the Winter Darkness for a much needed rest, and then welcome back the Sun with its ever lengthening days.

We will have the potluck FIRST as we did last year at 5:30, then drumming and the celebration at 6:30 pm

Earth is on its Perihelion, the orbital point closest to the Sun, a few weeks after Winter Solstice. Yet the daytime is shorter and we think of this season as colder, as a result of the axial tilt of our Earth Mother. The Latin word solstium, meaning 'the Sun stands still' is the basis for the word Solstice. Envision the Sun sitting on an apex, teetering and waiting for the slow slide towards longer, warmer days.

This is a family-friendly, all-congregation event. We encourage you to bring your drum and other musical instrument to add to the night’s energy. Don’t stay home for lack of kitchen skills! We welcome store-bought items the same as home-made. For more information or food ideas, contact CUUPS.

Caring Connections Committee
connects members in need with members who are able to lend helping hands.

Services we offer include a ride to Sunday services or a medical appointment, a home or hospital visit, a friendly call or card, occasional shopping for essential items, a loan of a medical item like a wheelchair or walker, and preparing and/or delivering a meal. We have a list of referrals for services we can’t offer.

Please stop by our table on Sundays to sign a card, request help or volunteer. For information, contact Mac Freeman.

We may still have some yellow maples to admire, as well as other signs of late fall and the return of the rainy season. Bring lunches, water. Carpool from Santa Rosa 9:30, Petaluma 10:00. Start from trail head 10:45. Get detailed directions and sign up, Gretchen P.

Treasurer’s Monthly Ledger

November is the month with the one holiday that asks nothing more than being thankful. As UU’s we are blessed with a forward thinking Minister, a new Assistant Minister providing much needed help to our Congregation, a relatively new DRE working with a growing mix of youthful UU’s, a new temporary Administrator providing more streamlined modes of operation, and an experienced Bookkeeper keeping us on track. And let’s not forget the rest of our staff, Sextant, office personnel and numerous part-time helpers. We are truly blessed with a dynamic and dedicated work force!

Much thanks to our recent $200,000 contribution to our Endowment fund from Gail Alford. Our Endowment fund is now over $450,000 and no doubt will continue to grow as the Endowment Committee adds more members to the Legacy Circle. Let’s also not forget these funds can be used in many ways to expand services and help with the physical structure, but these funds are restricted and cannot be used for operating the daily management of the Congregation finances.

Speaking of Congregational finances, let’s be thankful for members increasing their pledges for this Fiscal Year. We still have a way to go regarding pledge increases. As one of our Board members recently told me, “Our members don’t have to raise their pledges by a huge amount to make a difference.” For example, if just 150 members, each increased their current pledge by a mere $15 per month, we could raise $27,000 toward our current budget and close the gap needed for the budget. That is a big bang for a very small pledge increase.

Fiscally yours, Michael Randolph, Treasurer

Season’s Greetings from Your Stewardship Team

“Mankind was my business. The common welfare was my business; charity, mercy, forbearance, and benevolence were all my business.” Jacob Marley’s plea for recognition of our common humanity, from Dickens’s “A Christmas Carol”, has always moved me powerfully. It reminds us that we are each part of something larger than ourselves, a social web that transcends our individual identity.

UUCSR is a vital part of my social web, and I hope of yours. As Marley would say, our growing and self-sustaining congregation is our business. Expanding our mission “within and beyond these walls” is our business. That expansion, we have agreed, includes more pastoral care and enriching programs within our walls, and more outreach – particularly to young adults on college campuses – beyond our walls. To achieve this wider vision, the members of UUCSR collectively decided to hire an assistant minister. In 2018 we voted overwhelmingly as a congregation to approve the budget and move ahead with our initiative. Before our vote it was clearly explained that we would collectively need to increase our pledge income by about $60,000 to support this on a sustainable basis.

In other words, we voted “yes” to hiring Dara, and “yes” to supporting her position financially by raising our pledges. Those of you who have already done both steps, we thank you. Those of you who haven’t yet done step 2, it is critically important that you join us now us in completing “our business” by raising your pledge, at whatever level you can. All of us should take responsibility for doing what we voted to do. Only then will we fully “own” the vision as a congregation.

Scrooge got one thing right. He listened to Jacob Marley. And that one thing transformed his life, and the lives of those around him. We hope you will apply his lesson to our beloved community – and raise your pledge today. Blessings of the season to you!

For the Holiday Season:
A “Magic Blend” Served in Nutshells...

Ready for the holidays?

There's a simple children's song called "Magic Penny" that goes like this:

"Love is something if you give it away,
Give it away, give it away.
Love is something if you give it away,
You end up having more..."

It's a deceptively simple song. I was thinking about this recently as I encouraged my young child to think about the deeper messages of the December holiday season.

Micah has been busy looking at magazines, circling toys he would like to receive as presents for Christmas or Hanukkah. In our Jewish UU family, this got us to talking about what the holidays are really about and the deeper messages in ancient stories...

With respect to Christmas...the old stories tell of the generous and loving hospitality shown to a family that was traveling far from home. The stories share about the birth of a baby who grew to be a great teacher of justice. This teacher believed in taking actions that lift up all people, especially those who face injustice. What’s the message in nutshell? Face the world with love, give and receive generosity, work for justice.

With respect to Hanukkah...the stories tell of Judah Maccabbee and his Jewish community striving to re-build after a destructive tyrant king threatened their lives. The community returned to their ransacked temple, filled with broken glass and trash. They were concerned there was not enough oil to light the menorah, which cast such beautiful light. Just when they thought all was lost they found among all the wreckage one small jar of oil.

They found that this small jar actually could help the menorah burn for 8 whole nights! (Wow! Cool! A miracle!) I tell my kid this was an amazing miracle because people were working together creatively and didn’t give up trying. They found a sense of ‘enough-ness’, even in times that felt like maybe there wouldn't be enough! What’s the message in a nutshell? Don't give up hope, persist, resist, work together, get creative... sometimes...miraculously... there is enough... especially when we work together!

As Micah grows, we'll keep talking about this... what it means to enter a season of stories. I think these holidays have bold, necessary and transforming messages, when we reach back into the stories, and use them to talk about life here and now.

There is a new song we may start singing as the holidays arrive. It’s the “magic penny" song. It’s simple and a bit sing-songy — but the message is powerful. It’s one that speaks to my heart over this holiday season because it reminds me of a blend of these vital, teachable holiday messages...

These stories are about love and persistence. In giving love and showing up for one another we can create a sense “enoughness” which is miraculous in our communities and in the larger world.

What a good blend for the holidays.

Much care to you this season,

Rev. Dara

Musical Notes

I believe Plato once said, "Music gives a soul to the universe, wings to the mind, flight to the imagination, and life to everything."

This could be part of the reason people seem to associate music with worship. Our congregation's no exception. Who isn’t grateful for angelic harmonies, soaring melodies, uplifting rhythms, and inspiring lyrics? Our choir and music coordinators work week after week, planning, rehearsing, and performing to bring a spiritual musical experience to us.

In November we explored Gratitude, an appropriate theme for the Thanksgiving month. The first Sunday, Sally brought us "First You Cry", and we cried, being grateful for our wounds. Then came the Choir singing with "One Voice", which they also performed with the choir of Congregation Shomrei Torah in honor of the victims of the Pittsburg massacre.

The next aspect of gratitude we explore is "Thanks for nothing", embracing emptiness, an often misunderstood Buddhist teaching. In that context we heard "Zen Gospel Singing" by Chris, Carol, and Mary Lil, with Rose on the autoharp. The last Sunday of November it’s the choir’s turn again singing G F Handel's "Dank sei Dir, Herr": "Thanks be to Thee, O Lord".

December is a month for dreaming of Peace on Earth. Christmas, Hannukah, and the Winter Solstice will guide the selection of music to inspire the soul.

If any of this marvelous musical ministry inspires you, talk to a Music Coordinator or Choir Director Sadie to find out how to lend your voice or musical instrument to the mix.
